The first floor storefront is framed between smooth-finished ashlar granite piers with a flat bell arch. An angled glass wall flanks a pair of off-center doors, one giving access to the upper floors and the other to the restaurant currently occupying the first floor. Both doors are modern. The upper portion of the arch is partially filled in with a smooth concrete slab on which applied letters spell out "Quarter Moon Saloon." Above this is a narrow, projecting cornice without ornament. The upper floors are identical, each having a single tripartite window with fixed transoms. The windows have simple, almost flat molding outlines. Above the third floor is a flat, slightly projecting panel which leads up to a parapet with piers at each end rising above the top molding.

Significance:

Area: Architecture

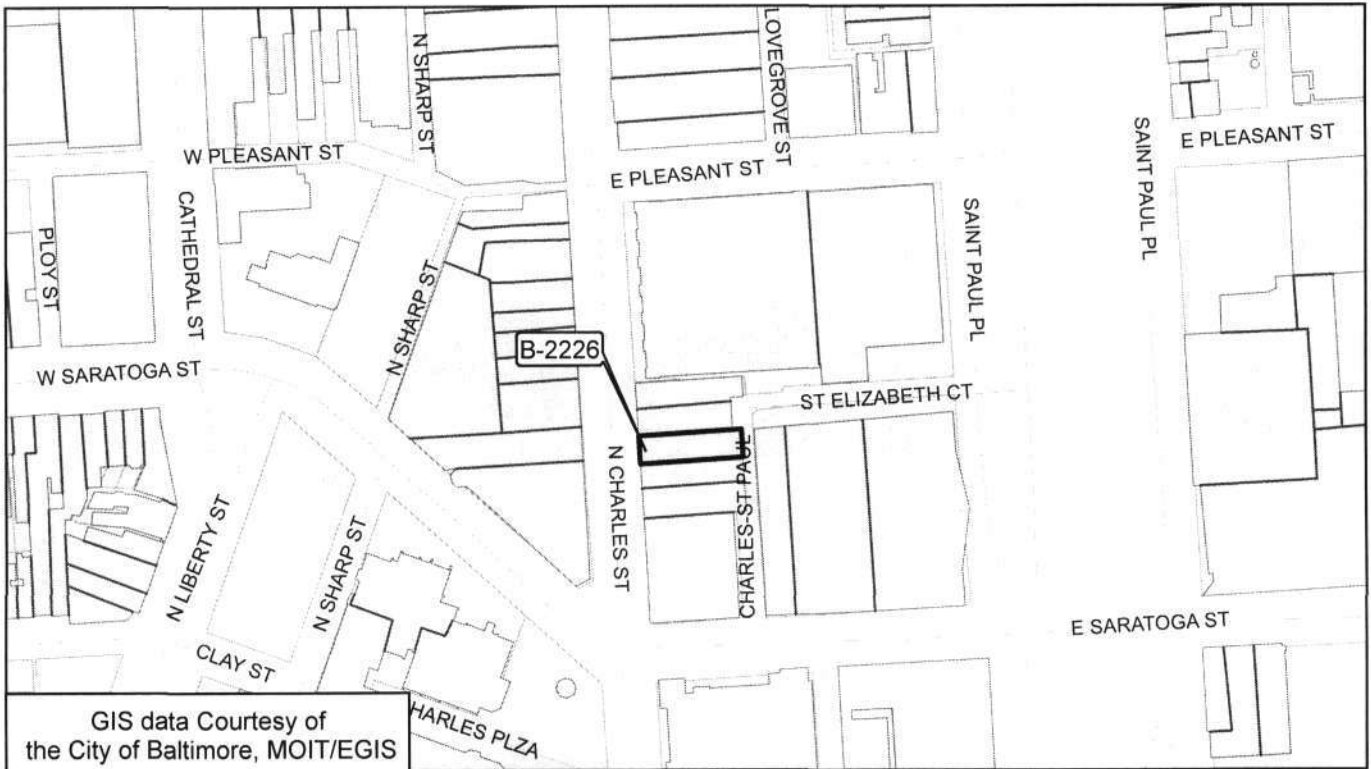

Level: Local

The almost severe lines of this facade are somewhat unusual in the Cathedral Hill area. It represents a transition between the more elaborate Classical Revival styles of the early 20th century and the stripped-down Classical Revival of the late 1920's and 1930's. The exact date of the facade's construction is unknown, but the 3-story building was erected prior to 1865, replacing the original 1805 two-story brick rowhouse on the lot. In the late 1870's, it was the residence of Nathaniel H. Thayer, the librarian of City College. By the 1890's, it was in commercial use and had a variety of tenants, including the NoOsCa hairdressing parlor in the 1920's and 1930's.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This three story high, single bay wide flat-roofed granite row building has a flat ashlar facade with minimal shallow detailing. The most deeply projecting facade member is a granite cornice above the first floor level, which is at most 8" deep.

The first floor has been altered to accomodate a broken, angled, plate glass and aluminum commercial front, with entrances on the left side. The first floor is framed by a flat bell arch framed between the end piers, which has a thinly incised border. The upper portion of the arch has been filled with concrete, and now supports a wide, blue and white rectangular electrified plastic sign. Between the top of the arch and the cornice, there is evidence of removed lettering.

The second and third floors support tripartite windows set with flat stone frames and sills. The large central pane of fixed glass is separated from smaller side lights by wooden mullions. Fixed transoms are above each member, two above the central light.

The wall rises to a flat parapet which supports a shallowly projecting, flat stone panel below a thin stone molding at the roofline. The flanking piers rise above the parapet and are similarly topped with stone molding.
